Earl Falls to Crack.

It was evident from the first that both hove had planned their earn-naign carefully before they entered the ring. Puryear's game was to start off at a fast clip and try to bile up a point lead sufficient to stave off the late rush which was to be expected of his stronger rival who naturally would be expected to conserve his greatest effort against the naturally would be expected to conserve his greatest effort against the lime when his weaker opponent should begin to show signs of fatigue. Instead of crack, however, Puryear held up to the very last and in the fifteenth round he came back with a bewildering shower of jabs and slaehes that ouddid Loadman's fassperate slugging.
